

THE CASTLE

AL-V-A-035

Castle Hill, Mt. Savage

1869 & 1909

The main block of the Castle was constructed for Dr. Alexander Thompson in approximately 1869. In 1909, Thompson's widow sold the property to Andrew Ramsey, a Scotsman. Ramsey operated Ellerslie Potteries which produced white enameled bricks as well as sinks and bath tubs. Ramsey enlarged the building in an effort to make it similar to a castle in his native Scotland. Although it is presently used as an apartment building, the Castle originally contained a sunken library, a ballroom lighted only by skylights, a gatehouse, a carriage house and a preservation cave in the rear of the building.

The Castle is located on Route 36 on the west side of the road at the junction of Castle Hill Road in Mt. Savage, Allegany County.

The Castle is an irregular rectangular shaped structure that is two stories high, three bays wide and six bays long. A rear wing abuts the main block on the western side and a second "L" shaped addition has been added to the rear wing. The building is of random ashlar stone construction and includes plain sandstone quoins at the corners of the principle facade. The entire structure is supported by an ashlar bond stone foundation with no visible water table. The roof of the main block is gabled with a wide soffit while that on the rear wing is mansard. Both are covered with replaced asphalt shingles. The roof is interrupted by eleven gabled dormers. Windows themselves are double hung wooden sashes set in lancet frames with a combination of two over two lights and four over four lights. The windows are topped by pointed arches with keystones. The main entrance is located on the east facade and consists of an arched opening with a fanlight. The main entrance is covered by a three bay end porch with a flat roof and tudor arches. Five original corbeled brick chimneys are located in the interior of the structure.

STATEMENT OF SIGNIFICANCE

The main block of "The Castle" was constructed for Dr. Alexander Thompson, a doctor for the Iron Works in Mt. Savage in approximately 1870. In the early part of this century, it was purchased by Andrew Ramsey, a Scotsman, whose trade was that of a brick maker. Ramsey added a wing to the house, ornamented it with his own white enamel bricks and renamed it "The Castle". These same white bricks were also used in the construction of the Mt. Savage jail and the Workman House in Frostburg. In addition to his refractories, Ramsey operated a ceramics laboratory in Corriganville where he experimented with the king of white enamel used in making sinks and bath tubs. The formula which Ramsey used in his brick factories was his own and unfortunately, it was lost. This is the reason why the brick has never been duplicated.<sup>1</sup>

Architecturally, the house was originally built in the style of the Gothic Revival. Ramsey elaborated on this style when he enlarged the building in an effort to produce a structure that would look similar to a castle from his native Scotland. Originally, "The Castle" included a sunken library, a ballroom lighted only with skylights, a gatehouse, a carriage house and a preservation cave in the rear of the building.

During the second World War, (1943 - 1945) the building was used as a supper club. This venture proved unprofitable and the structure was sold again as a private residence.<sup>2</sup> At the present time, the building has been divided into apartments.

5. Description of physical appearance:

At the intersection of Maryland Route 36 and Jealous Row at the western edge of the District stands a large stone Gothic-influenced dwelling known locally as "The Castle." Completed late in the 19th century by the owner of the enamel brick works, the house displays glazed brick trim in its chimneys and porches. The mansard roof is interrupted by tall dormers which extend from the facade through the overhanging eaves. A one-story porch, of stone with wide Gothic arches, spans the principal facade; each side elevation has a projecting bay window. A stone wall surrounds the property, and a stone gatehouse/garage in the same style as the house marks the entrance to the grounds, which were originally extensively landscaped.
